Denise McDonald

Making pots with textured slabs on the wheel

Denise is a potter based in Sydney. She creates practical and beautiful ceramic work that functions well and integrates into the daily lives of her customers.

Being handmade, every piece is unique in its details but collectable as sets.

She is interested in further exploring the relationship between handmade tableware and food culture. Food and ceramics are a natural partnership. To this end, she is interested in taking on more commissions from restaurants and attending food markets.

CSG Wednesday May 15th 2019

Come and join us at 16a Balcombe Heights Estate where Denise will give a presentation on her work. She will demonstrate how she textures slabs of clay, designs and uses patterns, and then uses the wheel to 'throw' the slabs to make functional tableware. She will make several different forms, showing how one simple starting point has developed into a tableware range. She will also bring a couple of leatherhard pieces to turn in order to illustrate the completion of the forms. Along the way she will talk about making a living as a potter.
